

The innocent trees howled in pain as the wind tortured them mercilessly - clearing a path for the vile beast that had suddenly awoken from its slumber. Cautiously, the curious girl walked through the great forest, that was home to the vicious creatures who were silently watching her. Whilst wandering across the field of strong oak trees, an uncanny feeling engulfed Lily, almost as if she was disturbing the silence. Looking around for support, Lily discovered an abandoned log cabin that rested between two tall trees. She couldn't help but sprint towards her only beacon of hope. Finally reaching her destination, the ground beneath her started vibrating - soon enough a hole appeared underneath the house and swallowed it gleefully; the girl's only hope was carelessly devoured. Panic overtook her mind as only a strong monster could have dealt so much damage. All the girl had left was a helpless bush that would provide no protection from such a powerful beast. Although the bush was all she had left, she had no choice but to hide there - waiting for the hideous creature to show its face. Suddenly, the forest shrieked in agony as the dreadful shout of the monstrous beast shook the woodland once again - it was nearby. This was Lily's only chance to kill the monstrosity. The trees and wind stopped - watching as the creature crawled towards the girl, was this it? Would the forest be free of the devilish monster? Without hesitation, Lily picked up a stone and hurled it at the beast that was towering over her. It comfortably ate the rock just like it did with the cabin. With nowhere to run to - Lily was devoured by the devilish beast, never to return.
